perpetual celebration of these anniversary Masses, the faithful often endowed the Church with pious endowments, consisting of annuities, land, or income intended to finance these services. This register thus lists the parish's various endowments, their donors, the liturgical obligations arising from them, and the revenues allocated to them. It offers particularly interesting insights into religious practices, family networks, the parish economy, and the collective memory of rural communities during the First Empire, just a few years after the upheavals of the French Revolution. A document of paramount importance for historians, genealogists, archivists, and collectors of ecclesiastical manuscripts and regional history.
