Description

White opaline ewer and basin with portraits of women, Napoleon III period, late 19th century
White opaline ewer and basin decorated with portraits of women, late 19th century
An elegant toilettries set in milky white opaline, dating from the late 19th century and consisting of a water jug and its matching basin. The ewer features an elegant pear-shaped body, extended by a flared neck with a gracefully curved spout. Its large curved handle, as well as the piece's contours, are delicately highlighted with gold fillets. The set is adorned with hand-painted polychrome portraits of women, set within graceful gilded medallions accented with pearls. Small polychrome floral reliefs and emerald-green geometric motifs enrich this refined composition. The circular basin
