Description

Rarely has a weave been this fine. That's the first impression--both visually and, above all, to the touch. Remarkable, impressive. This is a Khorjin--that's what it's called--in other words, a bag once used by the nomadic peoples of Persia to carry various goods. On the upper part, you can still make out the slit-closure system. Rings were used to fasten the whole thing shut, but they're gone now. Personally, I find this piece exceptional, and I can't help but marvel at the finesse of its weaving--it's truly moving. Exclusively plant-based dyes, in perfect harmony, with a gentle softness. It's elegant, refined--everything we love...
