Description

Dan Laillier was a painter and curator at the Musée des Cap-horniers in Saint-Malo. This large gouache, dated 1954, depicts a naval battle whose hero is Surcouf, the iconic privateer of the golden age when he ruled the seas....His courage and daring were legendary, sustained by a popular legend that has endured for centuries. The colors are contrasting--grays and reds--and the figure in the center conveys a sense of power and determination. It is a beautiful work by a Breton painter, in excellent condition in its original frame.
