Description

The Nubian Lioness, after Rembrandt Bugatti, is a bronze animal sculpture of silent power and rare beauty. Created around 1910-1912, during the artist's Antwerp period, the Nubian Lioness reflects his direct observation of the animals at the Antwerp Zoo. The bronze lion sculpture features a textured surface, where the imprints of the modeling retain all the vitality of the artist's touch. The warm patina catches the light like a coat of fur.
