Description

This bronze sculpture by Salvador Dalí, The Ostrich (2 parts), is a modern work depicting a stylized ostrich in two connected sections. Cast in bronze with a subtle patina ranging from light gold to deep brown, the sculpture features elongated legs, a slender neck, and an abstract, egg-shaped body. Signed by Dalí, it illustrates his surrealist approach, exploring duality, mirror realities, and the transformation of ordinary forms into conceptual and symbolic art. The two-part design creates balance and visual tension, offering different perspectives and highlighting the surrealist interplay between presence and emptiness.
