Description

Description This charming vintage oil on canvas depicts a tranquil European square centred around a traditional newspaper kiosk beneath mature trees, with figures gathered in conversation while another sits reading on a nearby bench. Executed in a confident post-Impressionist style, the painting employs expressive brushwork and a harmonious palette of greens, blues and warm ochres to evoke the atmosphere of everyday urban life. The interplay of dappled sunlight and shadow lends the composition a quiet sense of movement and warmth. Artist Possibly signed Català (lower right). The signature appears consistent with the Catalan surname Català, although this attribution remains unconfirmed. At present, the artist has not been positively identified and no secure attribution to a documented painter can be made based solely on the available photographs. Date Mid 20th century. Medium Oil on canvas. Style Post-Impressionist. Subject European street scene with newspaper kiosk and figures. Artist Influence The work reflects the influence of French and Catalan Post-Impressionism, favouring broad painterly brushwork, simplified forms and an emphasis on light and atmosphere over fine detail. The composition bears stylistic similarities to the work of Maurice Utrillo and several mid-century Catalan plein-air painters, while maintaining its own distinctive character. Condition Vintage condition overall. Minor age-related restoration, wear and light craquelure are present together with small areas, all consistent with age and use. The painting is presented in a later decorative frame displaying minor wear. Packing, Shipping and insurance from Barcelona calculated at checkout.
