5 000 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Bon état

Description

Elegant ladies' watch Hublot Genève Lady, made in Switzerland around 2005, representative of Hublot's historic aesthetic and its iconic "fusion" concept combining precious metals and natural rubber. The 30 mm case combines stainless steel with an 18-karat gold bezel, secured by the brand's signature exposed screws, as well as a titanium caseback. The watch features a black dial with gold applied hour markers, complemented by openwork gold hands and a date window at the 3 o'clock position. It is powered by a quartz movement displaying hours, minutes, seconds, and the date. The crown is signed Hublot. The crystal is sapphire. The watch retains its original black Hublot rubber strap, integrated into the case, as well as its signed steel and gold clasp. It comes with its original Hublot

Geneva presentation box. This model dates from the period prior to the launch of the Big Bang collection and retains the original design developed by Carlo Crocco, the brand's founder. Its combination of gold, steel, titanium, and rubber makes it an instantly recognizable piece--elegant, comfortable, and characteristic of early 21st-century luxury sports watchmaking.
