Description

A particularly original and decorative piece, crafted from solid cast bronze and featuring a beautiful natural patina in shades of brown and green. This small cannon is modeled after an actual piece of artillery and features well-formed trunnions on either side, a characteristic bell at the rear, and an open firing port at the top. The cannon also has a genuine bore. Its heavy and solid construction, along with its numerous technical details, make it a particularly interesting piece for collectors of military antiques, nautical objects, and historical bronzes. It may be a small bronze signal or ceremonial cannon, of a type that could have been used in the past in a nautical or maritime context. Its exact original function has not been determined with certainty. The original carriage or mount is missing. The object features a
