Description

A patinated bronze figure of an angel with a bow, depicted standing and walking, holding a bow in his hand that rests on the ground, with his quiver resting symmetrically on his back. The figure's circular movement is accentuated by the left arm, which wraps around the torso, thus creating the sinuous form characteristic of late Venetian Mannerism. The casting and original patina of this bronze indicate high quality; despite the object's small size, it is closely associated with the Master's work. Roccatagliata Workshop, Early 17th century. Former G. Laue Collection, Munich.
