"Vacheron Constantin Genève," "Overseas," and "Acier," as well as the famous central motif depicting a sailboat. The water resistance originally specified by the manufacturer was 150 meters; however, it should be tested before any use in water. The watch retains its original stainless steel bracelet, its Vacheron Constantin-signed folding clasp, and several spare links. The bracelet bears the code 423, and the clasp bears the internal reference 423/2. This example comes with its original Vacheron Constantin presentation box, its certificate of origin and warranty dated August 12, 2003, its manual, brochures from the Overseas collection, as well as an official adjustment report issued by Vacheron Constantin on December 5, 2003. The watch is in good overall condition. The dial is very well preserved, and the movement functions properly. The case and bracelet show normal surface marks consistent with the watch's age and use. The case also shows normal wear from storage. The presence of the original case, certificate, documentation, bracelet, clasp, and links--as well as the matching identification numbers--particularly enhance the appeal of this complete example of the first-generation Overseas. Case number: 760867. Movement number: 938869. Dial code: 8886. Bracelet code: 423.
