Description

A characterful Belgian oak stool from circa 1890, positioned at the intersection of Arts & Crafts integrity and early Jugendstil ornamental sensibility. The piece celebrates hand-crafted construction: solid oak shaped with sculptural contours, expressive grain, and traditional joinery that remains both functional and decorative. The stool features shaped legs with interlocking pegged joinery, a hallmark of late-19th-century Belgian craftsmanship. Its warm patina and architectural presence make it an ideal accent for interiors that value authenticity, material honesty, and understated artistry. The compact scale lends itself to versatile placement; as a decorative side stool, a sculptural object under a console, or a functional element in an Arts & Crafts-inspired vignette. Its blend of geometric restraint and
