Description

A rare antique pendant made of 750/°° (18-karat) yellow gold, in the style of a vinaigrette or perfume box. This hinged piece of jewelry contained an inner sponge, originally intended to hold aromatic vinegar, salts, or a perfumed substance, which was carried close to the body to revive ladies prone to "fainting spells." The piece features meticulous engraving, decorated with floral motifs and delicate scrollwork. Its original shape, scalloped edge, and fine curb-link chain connected by two rings give it all the charm of vintage functional jewelry. A truly beautiful, rare, and unique piece that will delight any lover of vintage jewelry--the kind no longer made today. Owl hallmark.
