Description

Watercolor of the Basque Country - View of the Port of Saint-Jean-de-Luz / Ciboure - Basque School, circa 1953 An elegant watercolor depicting a peaceful harbor scene in the Basque Country, most likely inspired by the docks of Saint-Jean-de-Luz or Ciboure. In the foreground, a few brightly colored fishing boats rest on calm waters, while in the background stand traditional houses with red shutters and the iconic hills of the Basque hinterland. The composition sensitively captures the serene atmosphere of these ports, which have preserved their maritime identity over the centuries. The work is executed with great freshness. The delicate washes, colorful touches, and spontaneous lines lend this composition all the poetry of 1950s travel sketches. Its style suggests it is the work of the same artist as the previous watercolor depicting Saint-Jean-de-Luz, although the signature remains unidentified to this day. Presented in its original frame, it is in very good condition and possesses undeniable decorative charm. It will naturally find its place in a seaside home, a country house, or a collection dedicated to the Basque Country and French regionalist painting. An authentic, luminous, and evocative work that will appeal to both watercolor enthusiasts and lovers of the Basque coast.
