Description

This desk embodies the excellence of French industrial design from the 1960s, a period when craftsmanship met innovation. Its structure consists of two curved chrome-plated steel elements connected by a crossbar, offering remarkable stability while adding a touch of modernity and elegance. These elements support two storage units upholstered in brown leather, each featuring a drawer framed by aluminum along the front edge. The interior of the cabinets reveals a precious wood: Macassar ebony, known for its deep luster, unique grain, and exceptional durability. This selection of fine materials underscores the attention to detail and quality of craftsmanship that characterize Dassas's creations. The tabletop, made of smoked glass with rounded edges, adds a dimension that is both functional and aesthetic. With impressive dimensions of 2 meters wide, 90 cm deep, and 74 cm high, this desk stands out as a centerpiece in any workspace, living room, or office. Its sleek design and elegant lines make it a timeless piece of furniture, capable of blending harmoniously into a variety of interiors, from the most classic to the most contemporary. In the photos, you can see that the desk is displayed in a setting filled with vintage items and antique furniture, which highlights its unique character. The chrome on the legs, while in need of cleaning to restore its full luster, retains a sturdy and sophisticated look. The leather on the drawers, meanwhile, shows a few scuffs--signs of its use and history--adding a touch of authenticity to this piece. This desk is sold as-is; it requires cleaning and minor restoration to restore it to its former glory. It represents a rare opportunity for collectors and enthusiasts of 1960s designer furniture. Its timeless style, meticulous craftsmanship, and high-quality materials make it a unique piece, perfect for enhancing an interior with character and history.
