Description

An elegant set of four chairs in ivory-lacquered wrought iron, attributed to the French interior designer René Prou (1887-1947), a leading figure in Parisian decorative refinement during the interwar period. These pieces captivate with the great finesse of their design, combining the geometric precision of Art Deco with a subtly reinterpreted neoclassical inspiration. The openwork backs reveal a pattern of symmetrical volutes centered around a twisted motif, while the twisted iron legs end in delicate, coiled finials, lending the set a remarkable visual lightness. The perforated sheet metal seat and the particularly airy structure evoke the high-end pieces created for villas, winter gardens, and elegant residences of the 1930s and 1940s. The quality of the metalwork, as well as the decorative style
