Description

Louis XIII-era armchair in walnut, circa 1680-1700. Authentic Louis XIII-era armchair, crafted from solid walnut and resting on a sturdy frame characteristic of the 17th century. It features a straight, openwork backrest with five turned balusters, armrests that are also turned, and carved crossbars connecting the legs, giving the piece great stability. The wood has retained a beautiful antique patina, highlighting the signs of age and the authentic character of this chair. The legs, crossbars, and turned elements showcase the craftsmanship typical of French furniture from the Louis XIII period. The seat is upholstered with an antique tapestry featuring dogs in a landscape, adding a charming decorative touch. This upholstery can be preserved for its authenticity or replaced according to the tastes of its future
