Description

Charming French ceramic egg cup with its matching saucer, created by Robert Picault in Vallauris, on the French Riviera, circa 1960. The ensemble features the artist's distinctive geometric decoration, combining a rich emerald-green glaze with white bands, a checkered pattern and warm brown accents. The small cup is securely attached to the center of the saucer, forming a practical and beautifully balanced breakfast piece. Robert Picault was an important figure in the postwar revival of Vallauris pottery and worked alongside several celebrated ceramic artists, including Pablo Picasso. His designs are particularly admired for their bold graphic patterns, Mediterranean palette and appealing handmade character. The underside bears Picault's painted "RP" monogram.
