Description

A personal object of devotion, a spiritual mirror? In a Louis XIV-style carved and gilded wood, typical of convent reliquaries, under a piece of blown glass so thick, wavy, twisted, and greenish in hue that one never sees anything like it, there is a text from the Book of Exodus, which the sister must have chosen--a verse considered the "call" or the source of her vocation. This text is handwritten, framed within a floral cutwork border and embellished with fragments of silk and gilding in faded colors within the openwork. This frame, placed in her cell, undoubtedly accompanied the life of prayer of a cloistered nun--Sister Rosallis? as marked on the back? Such an iridescent glass could have been an important aid for the examination of conscience. Dimensions: 28 cm x 22 cm. Frame in
