Beautiful 17th-century Dutch Cabinet

Description

Exceptional 17th-century Dutch cabinet in rosewood and ebony marquetry. A beautiful and imposing 17th-century Dutch cabinet, made of rosewood and ebony veneer, with rich architectural decoration. The front, with its remarkable presence, is organized around two doors with geometric panels, framed by black columns with carved capitals and bases. The panels feature an elegant interplay of rosewood and ebony veneers, accentuated by geometric fillets and frames. The upper section is adorned with a substantial architectural cornice, embellished with three carved mascarons with pull rings, while the lower section opens with two drawers and rests on three turned ball-shaped legs, typical of Dutch furniture from this period. The piece as a whole reflects a rich
