Description

A generous pine baker's cart from around 1900, built with three slatted shelves and set on sturdy metal casters that give it both mobility and industrial charm. The thick pine beams, visible joinery and honest construction reflect its original workshop function, while the proportions make it an appealing decorative and practical piece in a contemporary interior.

The wood shows a beautiful patina, developed through decades of use, with warm tonal variations and natural wear that add authenticity and character. This surface quality is exactly what makes early-20th-century utilitarian furniture so desirable today: tactile, lived-in, and visually rich.

Ideal as a display rack, kitchen island companion,
