Description

A rare Faenza majolica crespina, made during the late 16th century. The brim features a delicate decoration with a cherub rendered in the typical shades of blue, yellow, and ochre, while the wide, wavy brim is embellished with an elegant motif of swirls and small flowers. The "Compendio" style, which originated in Faenza in the second half of the 16th century, is distinguished by the simplicity of its design, the refinement of its white background, and its limited yet harmonious color palette--characteristics that make these majolica pieces among the most sought-after of Italian Renaissance production. The piece retains a pleasant period patina; there are some restorations and minor chips along the rim, visible in the photographs, which are consistent with the artifact's age.
