Description

A rare and elegant pair of small convex mirrors, known as "witch mirrors," from the Regency/Empire period, dating from the 19th century. Each mirror is adorned with remarkable carved and gilded decoration depicting an eagle with outstretched wings surmounting a circular convex mirror, finished with a cascade of stylized foliage in the neoclassical style. Very fine decorative quality with a strong visual presence on the wall despite their modest dimensions. The carved work and original gilding offer a superb, warm patina typical of authentic 19th-century pieces. The antique convex mirrors create a particularly elegant and sophisticated visual effect in interior design. In very good overall condition for antique pieces. Wear, slight losses, and patina consistent with their age. Well-preserved antique
