Description

An elegant majolica apothecary jar, made in Veneto in the 18th century. The piece features the classic cylindrical shape with a flared base and an outward-curving rim, embellished with a simple monochromatic blue decoration featuring stylized ornamental motifs on the upper and lower sections. The body bears an inscription in Gothic script, typical of apothecary jars intended for the storage of medicines and medicinal substances. The piece as a whole reflects the understated and refined taste of 18th-century Venetian craftsmanship.
