Description

Bronze desk inkwell, dating from the 19th century, featuring a richly openwork design inspired by the Neo-Renaissance style. Rectangular in shape, it consists of a wide top with a molded border framing an openwork design of scrollwork, foliage, and stylized motifs. It holds two covered inkwells, arranged symmetrically, whose domed lids are adorned with relief motifs and topped with handles shaped like leaf-adorned knobs. The piece is complemented on all four sides by substantial handles and openwork ornaments, giving it a particularly decorative silhouette. Beautiful quality of cast iron and chiseling. The bronze retains an antique patina, with signs of use and minor oxidation consistent with its age. A beautiful 19th-century desk accessory, both
