Description

These six elegant Italian chairs from the Barocchetto period(1720-1770) are made of natural wood. The backrest, consisting ofwith sinuous shapes, is made of molded wood and edged with a small cord; its upper section is carved with motifs of curves and counter-curves, a small flower, and stylized leaves, as well as motifs reminiscent of the French Regency period. The seat is upholstered; the seat's edge is scalloped and accented by a cord that tapers to a small scroll on the upper third of the leg, the tip of which is shaped like an animal's hoof, with a few strands of hair hanging down from it. In very fine condition, these chairs have been recently reupholstered, and while the petit point upholstery covering them may need to be replaced, the padding--which is in perfect condition--should be
