Description

Works by Francesco ALBANI
(1578-1660) 17th-Century Italian School
The lower painting: The Sleep of the Cupids (Nymphs Watching Over the Cupids). A charming allegorical scene depicting the youth of the cupids. In the foreground, several nymphs tenderly watch over a group of little cupids (putti) sleeping on drapery spread out in a flower-filled field. In the sky, a deity seated on a cloud (probably Venus or Juno) contemplates the scene from above.
The painting above: Pan Spying on the Bathing Nymphs. A mythological observation scene (similar to the myth of Pan and Syrinx). In the center and on the left, a group of nymphs is bathing and preparing themselves near a water jug at the foot of ancient ruins. On the right, the horned figure of the god Pan (or a satyr) emerges.
