Description

An elegant floor lamp from Staff Leuchten, a German manufacturer renowned for the quality of its lighting fixtures, produced in the 1960s. The model features a particularly slender and minimalist silhouette, characteristic of German design from this period. Its slender metal shaft extends down to a circular base, while the generously proportioned cylindrical shade balances the overall design. The original shade is made of high-quality raw silk fabric, whose slightly irregular texture lends it a warm and refined appearance. Its natural hue appears particularly soft when the lamp is lit, diffusing a warm and pleasant light. The lampshade has a few flaws and marks due to its age and use, which are visible in the photographs. These imperfections should be viewed as traces of its history and age. The electrical system has been completely rewired, allowing for safe daily use while preserving the lamp's original aesthetic. An elegant and timeless piece, representative of 1960s German modernist design, that will fit just as well in a contemporary interior as it will in a vintage or modernist setting.
