

Putney Bridge, London Watercolour

Description

This atmospheric watercolour depicts Putney Bridge, London, viewed across the River Thames with a small group of moored boats resting quietly in the foreground. Executed with confident, economical brushwork, the artist employs transparent washes of blue-green, grey, and muted earth tones to capture the tranquil character of the riverside landscape. The bridge forms the compositional focal point, framed by mature trees and softened architectural elements, while the generous use of untouched paper creates a luminous sense of light and space. Loose passages of colour are balanced by selective linear detail in the boats and bridge, demonstrating a skilled understanding of the watercolour medium. The restrained palette and spontaneous handling evoke the immediacy of
