Description

Directoire-Style Walnut Bench - 19th Century A very elegant bench made of solid walnut, in the Directoire style, dating from the 18th century. This piece features a remarkable backrest composed of three molded panels, framed by straight posts, as well as beautiful, crook-shaped side armrests with soft, elegant lines. The frame rests on four straight legs, lending the piece a beautiful simplicity characteristic of furniture from this period. The walnut displays a superb warm, deep patina, with beautiful nuances and signs of wear that attest to its age. A piece that is both decorative and functional, perfectly suited for an entryway, foyer, library, or country home. Period: 18th century Style: Directoire Material: solid walnut Height: 89 cm Width: 149.5 cm Depth: 32.5 cm Seat height:
