Description

A double-layered oval crystal goblet, one layer amber-colored and covered two-thirds of the way up by another layer of white opaline. The top is adorned with a wide gilded frieze--in both matte and glossy gold--depicting a mythological scene waiting to be discovered: a winged Victory faces a chariot drawn by four rearing horses, men in armor, a man holding a lion on a leash, and other figures against a background of arabesques. The base is cut with fourteen rounded facets accented by a line of gilding and points. At the top, an opaline border is highlighted along the edge by a gilded fillet. An exceptional piece in terms of its color, the fineness of its crystal, its gilding, and its craftsmanship; it likely originates from the Saint Louis crystal works. Late 19th century or very early 20th century. Very good
