320 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Restauré par notre atelier

Description

A charming table lamp whose lampshade--a hexagonal brass structure--supports a fringe of long, transparent glass rods. Among the rods, chains of small crystal beads, strung in tight rows, are arranged in a regular alternating pattern. Each chain ends with a light green faceted crystal bead. The light green beads, which are larger and more faceted than the other beads, mark the corners and add a delicate, barely perceptible touch of color. Condition: The lamp has a completely refurbished electrical system that is fully functional and safe for use; the rods are complete, aligned, and free of chips; the bead chains are intact; the brass is perfectly polished.
