Description

An Italian bedspread from the 1960s made of a fabric with a silky appearance, although it is not actually made of silk (the fabric is made of synthetic or blended fibers). The design is created using a jacquard weave, featuring geometric and floral motifs in starkly contrasting colors. The jacquard texture is very expressive and features raised effects that accentuate the depth of the pattern and the richness of the overall design. The fabric is edged on three sides by fringe, which frames the bedspread and enhances its decorative character. Condition: Excellent overall condition. Fabric is clean, with no tears. Fringe is complete.
