Description

A large, double-sided desk from the 1930s-1940s made of walnut, accented on the top and around the edges with beautiful draped maple. The tabletop, with its bronze-colored leather, is very elegant. A few fleur-de-lis motifs adorn the corners of the leather. A central drawer flanked by a door on each side. On the left, two rosewood drawers and a large storage space for files. On the right is a large drawer and an even larger storage area. It is a good height, allowing you to sit comfortably at it, even with a more modern armchair. This desk can be disassembled; the top and the two side cabinets separate, making it easy to move through any space.
