

Pair Of Louis XVI-era Wood Paneling Panels For Ceilings, Beams, Or Walls, 18th Century

750 EUR

Period : 18th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Painted wood

Width : 20cm

Height : 153cm

Description

A pair of carved and lacquered wood paneling elements, consisting of a large rosette in high relief and two cascades of oak leaves and acorns, held in place by a ribbon. This is a masculine and martial motif, with the oak tree evoking Mars, the god of war. A Louis XVI-era piece, circa 1780. These high-quality architectural elements have several possible uses: as the essential narrow connector between two panels--which is nearly impossible to find--as well as side ornaments for a trumeau above a fireplace, or even as a ceiling or beam ornament to be hung. Very fine quality carving, delicate and dynamic. Good overall condition; needs repainting with some touch-ups to the plasterwork or stripping. Length: 153 cm Width: 20 cm

Dealer

GSLR Antiques

French Antiques - 18th to 20th century.

Mobile : +33658910924

4 rue Vicat

Grenoble 38 000