Description

Important 19th-century oak store counterA rare and remarkable 19th-century oak store counter, featuring a particularly imposing design and an exceptional presence. This large commercial piece stands out for its front panel featuring numerous drawers and compartments, originally designed for organizing and storing small goods. The open central section is fitted with two shelves, while the upper tier also features a large series of small drawers. The entire piece is topped by an elegant balustrade with turned balusters, running the full width of the counter. The generously shaped side posts, as well as the molded panels on the back, attest to the care taken in its craftsmanship. Made entirely of oak, this counter boasts a beautiful antique patina and a particularly sturdy construction. With its dimensions, its decoration,
