Description

Large Japanese porcelain dish from the Edo period, mid-19th century. This large dish is in excellent original condition; it measures 46 cm in diameter and is decorated in blue and white, depicting two birds amid a design of branches. It features the original metal fastening system, which explains the dish's excellent condition--it has likely never been used. It makes a beautiful decorative statement with a lovely monochromatic palette of blues beneath the glaze, complemented by a stunning glaze that is also in excellent condition. Can be paired with a similar platter (see the last photo) to create a beautiful matching pair from the same source. Delivery available in France and worldwide via secure, insured shipping with order tracking. Invoice and certificate provided. Pickup is available on-site at
