Description

Centerpiece: a gilded bronze column with a rotating decoration of putti--cherubs holding hands to form a circle--supporting the gilded brass bowl. At their feet, dolphins alternate. The cherubs have completely different poses, which allows you to change the dance formation by rotating the piece--making it much more dynamic than a symmetrical arrangement of cherubs. The style, aesthetics, and even the movement of the cherubs are reminiscent of works by CLODION (unsigned piece). The gilded brass bowl is crafted in the LXVI style. It can be used as a trinket dish or to hold a tray, a candle, etc. (or nothing at all). In good overall condition.
