Description

Decorative plaster column - Eliodoro Coccoli Collection
Early 20th century
Dimensions: Height 32 cm x 11.5 cm x 11.5 cm
This refined decorative column is a fine example of plaster sculpture, characterized by a cylindrical shaft of remarkable proportional balance. The work stands out for its richly illustrated iconography, featuring, in the central section, a standing female figure. The figure's facial features and drapery are rendered through a skillful use of high relief, a technique that lends sculptural depth and a dynamic interplay of light and shadow, framing the effigy within ornamental elements that enhance its compositional verticality. The shaft rests on a solid, molded base, embellished with dense motifs of acanthus leaves and symmetrical volutes--distinctive stylistic elements derived from the Corinthian order but reinterpreted here according to the eclectic taste of the early 20th century. The capital at the top formally echoes the decorations of the base, unifying the structure into a harmonious whole with great visual impact. Stylistically, the piece can be attributed to the early 20th century, a period in which the revival of neoclassical sculpture blended with new decorative sensibilities. Of exceptional significance is the object's historical provenance; it was once part of the private collection of the renowned Brescian artist Eliodoro Coccoli (1880-1974). The condition is excellent, with an original surface patina that enhances the textural quality of the plaster, displaying slight and elegant signs of wear perfectly consistent with the period and the authenticity of the piece. The work is currently on display in the monographic exhibition "Eliodoro Coccoli: Magnificent Draftsman" at the "Antichità Santa Giulia" gallery through December 31, 2026. The work, like all of our other items, will be sold accompanied by a certificate of authenticity.
