Description

Large metal sculpture with a brass- and copper-like patina depicting an imperial eagle with outstretched wings. This is an animal-themed art sculpture from the 1970s, typical of certain brands such as Jensen or Charles. Some designers, such as Duval Brasseur and others, also employed this sculpting technique, which involves assembling brass pieces using solder and a heat-applied patina. This piece is large, measuring 95 cm in height and up to 60 cm in width. Unfortunately, there is no visible signature on this beautiful piece, so please contact me for more information. I am happy to assist you.
