Description

A renowned Dutch landscape painter of the Dutch Golden Age. This work depicts a traditional Dutch panoramic landscape, with the majestic St. Bavo's Church--Haarlem's main landmark--standing out against the horizon. In the foreground, open fields and wooded areas stretch out, creating a harmonious and peaceful composition. Born in Haarlem in 1628, the artist came from a family of artists. At the age of ten, he became a student of the painter Jacob de Wet the Elder, with whom he studied for ten years. Throughout his career, he devoted himself to Dutch landscape painting. His works are distinguished by a subdued yet rich palette, dominated by warm ochre, olive, and green tones. Vermeer's paintings are housed in numerous museums around the world.
