Description

An elegant pair of lacquered and gilded armchairs from the mid-19th century, of Italian origin. The armchairs are distinguished by their sinuous and soft lines, typical of Rococo design, which was revived and adapted in the mid-19th century, particularly during the Louis-Philippe period, as is the case with this pair of armchairs. The frame is entirely curved, with no right angles; the four legs feature the classic saber or cabriole shape, slightly arched outward and finished at the bottom with small scroll-shaped feet. The armrests are openwork, slightly set back from the seat line, and feature a small padded insert for added comfort. The armchairs are finished with an ivory-white or cream lacquer, with the reliefs and moldings highlighted by gold leaf gilding. The upper part of the backrest and the central
