Description

Watercolor, 43 cm x 56 cm, plus wooden frame, 70 cm x 80 cm Signed lower right: L BARTA This painting depicts a small beach in Corsica where the artist lived for a few years. A beautiful modernist composition with a magical array of colors and a touch of pointillism from this artist, who evolved from Fauvist Expressionism toward abstraction via Cubism. Born in 1902 in Hungary, Laszlo BARTA studied at the Budapest Academy of Fine Arts, where he received an award in 1925. He soon left his country due to his political convictions and his membership in the Jewish community. After arriving in France in 1926, he exhibited at the Salon d'Automne from 1927 through 1938, as well as at the Société Nationale des Beaux-Arts in 1927 and 1928. During World War II, he took refuge in Saint-Florent, Corsica, where he joined the Resistance under the alias "Brutus." He was arrested and imprisoned in Italy in 1943. At the end of the war in 1948, he was naturalized as a French citizen for his actions in the Resistance. Having arrived in St. Tropez in 1930, he married a young woman from Toulon in 1947, and they turned their home into a sort of communal living space. A much-loved figure in the village, he was close friends with Robert Baudinière. Mosaic became his primary medium of expression beginning in the 1950s. He received several commissions for schools in Paris and Saint-Lô, as well as for the National Museum of Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe) in Salisbury. He collaborated with Raymond SUBE on the design of furniture. His early painting, initially figurative and reminiscent of the Fauves, was heavily inspired by the landscapes of Saint-Tropez; however, his encounter with Albert GLEIZES definitively steered him toward an artistic style closer to Cubism and abstraction. He died in 1961 in Saint-Tropez, where he is buried. An exhibition was held in Saint-Tropez in 2022, where he was honored. A large painting has just sold in Budapest for over 20,000 euros. The Galerie Guardia in Le Castellet specializes in his work and has a permanent collection of his pieces. Sold with a certificate of authenticity. Free shipping within the European Union. 250 euros for international shipping.
