Description

A rare set of 11 Locré porcelain plates from the early 19th century, marked with blue crossed swords and featuring a rare decoration known as "Sone and Coquerel" (associated with Legros d'ANIZY)--a technique patented in 1808 for printing decalcomania designs on earthenware, porcelain, and crystal-- it allowed for the printing of engravings with great clarity and provided greater durability to the glazes The set of 11 plates presented here is a fine example of this, featuring a wide variety of designs and motifs, as well as the patterns and decorations on them Rare pieces; some plates show signs of wear and old cracks, yet the collection remains very consistent,
