in Italy in 1943. At the end of the war in 1948, he was naturalized as a French citizen for his service in the Resistance. Having arrived in St. Tropez in 1930, he married a young woman from Toulon in 1947, and they turned their home into a sort of communal living space. A much-loved figure in the village, he was close friends with Robert Baudinière. Mosaic became his primary medium of expression beginning in the 1950s. He received several commissions for schools in Paris and Saint-Lô, as well as for the National Museum of Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe) in Salisbury. He collaborated with Raymond SUBE on the design of furniture. His early painting, which was figurative and reminiscent of the Fauvists, was heavily inspired by the landscapes of Saint-Tropez, but his encounter with Albert GLEIZES definitively steered him toward an art style closer to Cubism and abstraction. He died in 1961 in Saint-Tropez, where he is buried. An exhibition was held in Saint-Tropez in 2022, where he was honored. A large painting has just sold in Budapest for over 20,000 euros. The Guardia Gallery in Le Castellet specializes in his work and has a permanent collection of his pieces on display. Sold with a certificate of authenticity.
