Description

Jan Josef Horemans was a renowned master of genre painting, a highly celebrated Flemish artist, and a chronicler of daily life in Antwerp during the first half of the 18th century. This gouache on parchment, previously unknown and unpublished, bears a faint, barely legible signature. However, both the overall composition and the specific details depicted in the work strongly evoke his style. Elements such as the hanging birdcage, the screen near the fireplace, and the family gathered around the table are very characteristic of his work. This exquisite gouache is in impeccable condition and completely free of defects.
