Description

With its sculptural silhouette and generous proportions, the Birillo looks as if it came straight out of a futuristic 1970s interior. This glass lamp plays on the balance between two organic shapes: a voluptuous base in a sunny, almost liquid yellow, topped by a white opaline globe with soft curves. Between the two, a metal ring emphasizes its Space Age character, blending the industrial coolness of metal with the sensuality of glass. Once lit, the Birillo does more than just provide light: it becomes a presence in its own right, diffusing a soft glow while its colorful base seems to glow from within. Halfway between a functional object, a light sculpture, and a pop icon, the Birillo celebrates an era when design dreamed of the future with optimism, boldness, and imagination. Its Italian-sounding name
