Description

This intimate scene was created in oil on canvas by the Scandinavian artist Th. Gullander in the early 20th century. The composition opens before the viewer a serene coastal landscape, where sandy dunes are divided by a secluded path, gently descending toward the line of the surf. Masterfully employing the confident, thickly built-up texture of the brushstroke in the impasto style, the artist endows the landscape with a natural allure, dissolving the clouds into a light haze and uniting them with the shimmering water surface of the sea into a single lyrical symphony. In this context, one senses the high professionalism of the artist, well acquainted with the plein air painting of the Scandinavian tradition, that movement which taught artists to trust their own eye more than the academic
