Description

This porcelain vase is painted on the front with a polychrome bouquet; the artist has depicted various flowers, whose colors he has skillfully harmonized; they are rendered with such realism and delicacy that one could mistake them for real. Roses stand alongside peonies in deep red, the arrangement brightened by the white of the lilies and accented by yellow and purple flowers. On the back, a few swirls complete this multicolored composition; among them are charming pansies, delicate clematis, vigorous morning glories, and two plump roses. In very good condition; the only wear is on the gilding along the collar edge. Mid-19th century, height 29.5cm.
