Description

This Venetian blown-glass chandelier, crafted in Murano in the late 19th century, embodies the elegance characteristic of the island's artisanal tradition. The transparent and white glass, enhanced by golden hues, lends the piece a refined luminosity. The six lights are supported by curved arms, skillfully alternating with cascading leaves, creating an interplay of volume and transparency. The upper canopy is adorned with four flowers and four leaves, completing the composition with a touch of natural beauty and harmony. This chandelier is a fine example of Venetian glassmaking, perfect for spaces that call for an element of prestige and history. ANILLA0323999
